Tuesday, August 6th - Guest Presenters - The Equity Collaborative (TEC)

8:30 am - 5:00 pm

The fundamental opportunity in equity work is helping adults to grow and change so that they can better support students to grow and change. The Equity Collaborative is excited to partner with NTN for a day-long session focused on developing and practicing the skills of Equity Centered Coaching.

Improving educators' coaching skills can help them lead others to embrace change and replace current inequitable practices with new relational approaches. In this session, we position listening and asking questions as the central skills in coaching and creating culturally responsive communities. Participants will practice their coaching skills with real world scenarios that delve into topics of identity and cultural schema.

Our session outcomes:

1. Connect across differences in order to increase trust across the group and build a place to practice with each other;
2. Consider listening as a culturally responsive coaching and teaching skill to increase cultural proficiency and better diagnose challenges;
3. Practice asking better questions to encourage reflection and change in others;
4. Develop skills for coaching change in challenging contexts, including social-emotional intelligence and building trust and relationships.
